

Joint procurement of innovation

Emission-free construction sites

Fossil free construction sites are already within reach. We are now moving forward in the dialogue with the construction industry in order to develop emission-free technology and solutions.

Process

1

Background

In 2016, Oslo municipality challenged the suppliers for a fossil-free building site. Now the largest public developers are united in a joint initiative with the goal of emission-free solutions.

2

Development

The clients have agreed upon future requirements for emission-free solutions, and during 2018 several development runs for emission-free solutions will be launched.

3

Procurement

Several procurements of emission-free construction sites have been made in Norway. Other countries are following.
